Once upon a time there lived a poor family of four who resided in a lonesome cottage in the Harz Mountains—a rural area in northern Germany. The parents, both broom makers, are named Gertrude and Peter. The children are named Hansel and Gretel. Hansel is the younger. Gretel is the older.

ACT I

Our story begins in the family's cottage. Hansel and Gretel are home alone as their parents have gone out to sell brooms in the neighboring villages. The two children are supposed to be doing chores. But housework is challenging and tiresome when stomachs are empty and the desire for treats is overwhelming. The kids begin to play and dream, and at the height of their delight, their mother returns home, unhappy and weary from the long day. She's returned home with no money and no food. Frustrated and out of patience she scolds her children and orders them into the forest to forage for wild strawberries for dinner.

Later that evening, Father returns home. He is boisterous and beaming having sold his wares for a healthy sum. He unpacks and reveals the tasty treats he's brought home for the family. In doing so he asks to see his children, only to be horrified that they have ventured into the woods after nightfall.

ACT II

The children, finding strawberries, blissfully fill their baskets. They've made their harvesting a game, but in doing so, have forgot the time and their way home. Nightfall happens fast in the forest and now certainly Hansel and Gretel are lost. They believe in witches and fairies and find themselves at Ilsenstein. Ilsenstein is a special place made of rare granite in the Harz Mountain range where magic has unique power and evil gathers. Wind whispers, trees and shrubs seem to come to life, and sprites loom in the shadows, all just out of reach.

With no place to go, no direction to turn, the children huddle together at the base of a wise old tree and recite their usual bedtime prayer to the fourteen guardian angels—the fourteen venerated saints who help ward-off harm. Their spirits calmed, Hansel and Gretel fall asleep, both visioning angelic protection from above, keeping them safe from the unknown that surrounds them.

SYNOPSIS CONTINUED

ACT III

The scene begins in the forest at first-light the next morning. Hansel and Gretel awake and are joyous once again. They notice a charming, inviting little cabin that they must have only just missed the previous night due to the evening's darkness. Then they notice that the cabin is not made of wood or stone, but of yummy things to to eat. It even smells delicious. Alas, we all know the cabin upon which the children have stumbled. This is the home of the witch who uses magic to trap little children. She fattens them up with sweets, bakes them in her magical oven, which then turns them into gingerbread so that she may gleefully devour her captives, being not human, rather a magical ogre.

Hansel and Gretel can't help themselves approach the cabin and eat, and eat, and eat. All manner of delicious things they find, rapturing them so. The witch appears and casts a powerful spell, halting the children's escape. Hansel gets locked up in a cage and fed the most delectable food. Gretel is invited over to the oven to help with the baking in an attempt by the witch to immediately get the lass in the oven, satiating the witch's desperate hunger. But Gretel smartly pretends not to understand the witch and as the witch frustratingly demonstrates how and where she desires Gretel to be (for her future demise), Gretel frees Hansel and the two children, instead, quickly shove the witch into the stove.

The children have rescued themselves. They've out-dueled the witch. They dance. They sing. The spell is broken. And all around them, what were once gingerbread decorating the cabin, children are transformed back into their original shape, healthy and grateful to be free of the witch's yummy trap. Hansel and Gretel are thanked and a celebration begins. Then, bursting onto the scene is Hansel and Gretel's mom and dad. They've been searching all night. And so with great relief they join in the merry chorus and sing together, thankful for their family.

Let's first address the elephant in the room. If you search for "Engelbert Humperdinck," one of the best names of all time, you'll discover not one but TWO superstar musicians. One is a crooner, a Brit born in India, with the given name Arnold Dorsey whose singing career started in the late 50s and is still going strong loungerockin' thanks to Beavis and Butthead, Eurovision, and most recently the Marvel Cinematic Universe. Not kidding; this is too good to make up! Ours is not this guy.

Our Humperdinck was a friend of Richard Wagner. Ours had his music conducted by Richard Strauss and Gustav Mahler. Ours wrote one of the most frequently performed operas the world has ever seen.

Hansel and Gretel was an immediate hit. Funny, the music was originally composed for a Christmas puppet show at the suggestion of his sister, Adelheid, who also wrote the libretto based on the fairytale made popular by The Brothers Grimm.

The opera, intended for children, was premiered December 23, 1893 and has been associated with Christmastime ever since.

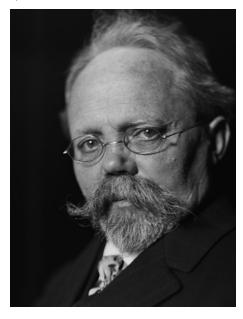

Beside the music just sounding great, with the robust scoring of a Wagner opera yet the lightness of Italian verismo, the setting of the story itself is captivating. There is no love, betrayal, war, or situation of monumental consequence! Instead, the only pain is hunger. The only vice is chocolate. Innocence is enchanting!

Hansel and Gretel is real life. Work is hard. Food is expensive. We all get tired and scared sometimes. Poverty and food insecurity are common.

This gives us solace.

We don't need a sword in a stone. We don't need a mythic protector. The wits of two ordinary kids save the day. We can do hard things when we work together and persevere. Kids are inspiring. •

UPCOMING

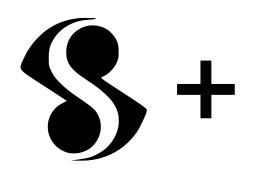

BELONGING SUNDAY, APRIL 26, 3PM

A concert exploring the profound feeling of belonging, this is installment three of our Antonín Dvořák symphony cycle. Here we have his pastorale Eighth Symphony, a work brimming with joy and a sense of shared humanity. Also on the program, a collaboration with UWO choirs under the direction of Dr.

Kristin Ramseyer. With them, two choral masteries by Johannes Brahms will be sung. Nänie and Schicksalslied are deeply reflective pieces, brimming with beauty and hope. They remind us of our collective journey and our shared experience. This music celebrates that which connects us.

This concert was inspired by Romanesque architecture in Oshkosh. Examples are Trinity Episcopal Church and United Methodist Church, both on Algoma Blvd. It embodies belonging through its monumental design and purpose, to create central gathering places, imposing presences to offer physical and spiritual refuge. The structures are intended to embrace the public, facilitating communal worship or unity.

LINUTESTY OF MISCONSIN

OSHKOSH

A NEW PARTNERSHIP

Oshkosh Symphony Orchestra and University of Wisconsin Oshkosh have formed a new partnership to better serve the community.

Both OSO and UWO play a vital role in the area in regard to education, cultural enrichment, and community building. It is envisioned that partnering will strengthen a shared mission: to best serve the people of Oshkosh and beyond through education, economic development, and the presentation of exceptional musical programing that "heighten intellectual, cultural, and humane sensitivities." (UW System Mission Statement)

A NEW MODEL

OSO and UWO are made stronger by inviting members of the community to come together, work together, and build something together. Actually, community music making was OSO's model decades ago. When the orchestra was founded in 1941, the then called Oshkosh Civic Symphony was comprised solely of community musicians. Then, it was intrinsically representative and responsive to the community. OSO intends to learn from the success of this model.

Now, OSO may once again offer the finest musical product while also serving the community. Side-by-side, adult community musicians perform with area professionals and UWO students, deepening that which connects us.

MORE EDUCATION

The collaboration allows both OSO and UWO to emphasize its educational mission and prepare people for success later in life. Now, UWO students will have the opportunity to perform with OSO, honing their skill as they perform next to mentors as well as learn transferable skills from leaders in the community, regardless the student's major or future profession. �

Merch. Merch. Merch.

That's right, OSO's got merchandise now. 🤣

To celebrate each new season, a design is created, featuring one of the composers that will be performed. Celebrating our 84th Season, young Brahms adorns our year's design.

Proceeds support great music making in our community. The full, official store is hosted by Bonfire. More info @ oshkoshsymphony.com/shop
